Delaware State University is now offering education courses required for certification or recertification for drug and alcohol counselors. The initial offerings will include two-week modules that meet on Friday evenings and Saturdays. Please note that there are 12 consecutive modules in this preparation program and both Friday evening and Saturday are required to attend for completion credits.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics projects that Drug and Alcohol Counseling will grow 31% over the next 8 years, much faster than the average rate for other occupations. Despite the projected need, Delaware generally and central Delaware specifically have few educational offerings to meet the educational requirements of the International Certification & Reciprocity Consortium’s (IC&RC) certification for Alcohol and Drug Counselor (CADC).

To help meet this need, the Psychology Department will offer courses designed to fulfill the CADC educational requirement for community members as well as continuing education credits for the recertification of current CADCs.
